How to update your World Account details: Individual name to Registered Business Entity

If you encounter any problem, please contact your relationship manager and we will be more than happy to answer them.

You will be required to register for a new World Account online with your company entity and ACRA.

- You can continue to use your existing individual World Account if you wish.
- Funds in your individual World Account is non-transferable to your new company World Account. You may wish to withdraw your funds back to your bank account or pay out to supplier.

*more documents may be required depending on your company structure. Step 2: WorldFirst will send the new terms & conditions within two working days once we receive your new account details.

Kindly acknowledge the new terms & conditions under your new entity.

FAQs

1) Will there be any charges or fees to change from an individual account to company account?

No fees charged.

2) What is the difference between an Individual World Account and Business World Account?

There's no difference in product feature or margin pricing. The only difference is that the currency account holder name will follow your World Account entity name.

3) I'm still deciding if I want to operate as an individual or company, can I sign up for the World Account as an Individual first and change to business later on?

Sure, you can! Simply follow the three steps above to amend your World Account entity when you decide to register for a business in future.
